Shuji Mori Named Chief Executive Officer of Yokogawa Corporation of America

Yokogawa Corporation of America announces that Shuji Mori, a company veteran who has been with Yokogawa for nearly three decades, has been appointed Chief Executive Officer of Yokogawa Corporation of America. In the role of CEO, Mr. Mori will be responsible for all day-to-day business operations in North America.

Mr. Mori began his career as an engineer, helping implement systems projects for Yokogawa customers all over the world. Over the years he has held a variety of roles throughout the company, most notably in global major account sales, and has acquired extensive experience in the global industrial automation market.

"The North American market is changing rapidly, and Yokogawa Corporation of America has huge growth potential in this strategically important region," said Takashi Nishijima, President and CEO of Yokogawa Electric Corporation. "I am very confident that Yokogawa Corporation of America will become a stronger organization under his leadership and continue to focus on building a brighter future by creating value with our customers."

"At the end of the day, all successful business is based on personal trust. We always aim to understand our customers first - their business goals, the challenges they face, and how their companies operate," said Mr. Mori. "I will make every effort to ensure Yokogawa's day-to-day operations in North America remain focused on generating new value with our customers and driving the growth of their businesses."
